It may have been the year that defined our generation. Up until September 11, 2001, no one knew what to call our rich, spoiled generation. We were aimless - we had no causes, no wars, no real purpose, except to succeed. The world was our oyster. Now our pearl is gone.

It was also a year of growth. Despite a dip in enrollment and funding, the college community learned what community is all about. We were all in it together, trying to show the world that Goshen College is a special place, where justice, academics and service blend to create an altogether new category of being. We were coming together, with each person adding their individual parts, we were starting to form a whole.

"As we advance in life it becomes more and more difficult," said Vincent Van Gogh, "but in fighting the difficulties, the inmost strength of the heart is developed." Many would agree, it was a tough year. But through the struggle, a heart was being developed - one that may define Goshen College for years to come. The following pages tell that story...

streets on Havana late last Friday.
Paul Horst, a first-year from Evan-the back of the head after being

When they returned to the bus, the youths surrounded Romero and attempted to steal his wallet. "I was trying to take their hands out of my pockets," said Romero.

Meanwhile, Horst reported that another man "ran full speed, out of nowhere, and just picked me up," while a second assailant sliced open Horst's pant pocket and cut

$4.6 million granted for peace

BEN BEACHY
STAFF WRITER

President Shirley Showalter received a call last Thursday afternoon from a representative of Lilly Endowment Inc., who informed her that Goshen College had just been approved to receive over $4.6 million in a grant directed to fund peace studies at the college.

This money is part of the larger Plowshares Grant from Lilly Endowment that will equally fund the peace studies programs at GC, Earlham College, and in Indiana, which included the collegiate peace studies programs offered in the state.

Lilly chose the three colleges partially because they represent the historic peace traditions of Quakers (Earlham), Mennonites (Goshen), and the Church of the Brethren (Manchester).

In late 2001, the three presidents jointly applied for the $13.9 million grant with the stated intent of "developing the foundation for what could

Julia Kasdorf, professor and poet, will speak on language in the world after September 11 in an address titled "War Stories" for Goshen College's ideological rhetoric that has run freely from peopl across the world since the terrorist attacks.

Discussing the use of language leading to failures ideology, Kasdorf will touch on what it means to b next generation of college graduates. GC's 104th commencement will take place on May 26 at 3 p.
